Tensions rising in Chumani

Update From Chumani, Kilifi Following clashes overnight in Chumani casualties, including police officers, were reported. No voting has taken place in Chumani on 4th March. At 3pm on March 4th tension is still very high in the area. Reports from the area state: 1. the number of casualties is higher than official figures 2. hearing gun fire for around an hour overnight. 3. police collected bodies of fallen officers 4. two bodies have not been collected and are still lying in the bushes 5. The two bodies lying in the bushes have red headbands which usually indicates affiliation with the MRC. 6. The presence of uncollected bodies is increasing tension in the area. 7. The local community are not collecting the bodies, as they do not recognise them, they are strangers in the area. Residents of the area are scared as nightfall approached because 1. There are rumours that some police firearms were stolen and the residents fear police may mount an operation overnight to recover the firearms which may result in more deaths 2. There is no public transport operating so residents can not leave. Residents would like police to confirm if any police firearms were lost in last nights attack. Residents would like assurance of security on the night of 4th March.

Action taken
